Sir Arthur's Report Gives Year's Work

Expresses Spirit of Optimism For Coming Session

DRASTIC ECONOMIES FOR NEXT SESSION

Work of New Departments Of University Well Outlined

No phase of University life was omitted in the annual report of the Corporation made public on Saturday by Sir Arthur Currie. The Principal's report, comprising a detailed review of the present situation of the University, and touching upon all the important events which have occurred since the last report was made, fills a ninety page booklet, in addition to which there are the individual reports of all the faculties. In spite of hard times, the report expresses a spirit of optimism and hope in the future of McGill.

"The most serious situation confronting the university is, of course, a financial one, and before beginning my report on the specific work of the various departments in the university during the past year, may I take this opportunity to mention certain matters of importance concerning the present status of the university in its relation to the community," Sir Arthur writes.

Growth of Universities

"In our country, and in any country, universities owe their origin to the necessities of a community. The growth of our Canadian universities from their small beginnings has been phenomenal. Indeed, our educational development is one of the most outstanding facts in our national history and the very existence today of a chain of excellent colleges reaching from coast to coast is evidence of the determined adherence of our fathers to their belief that enlightenment and civilization are one and that progress is dependent on education. The original charter of McGill, granted in 1821, provided for a principal and four pro-

The work in the Swayze area of late years has been of a nature to arouse the interest of all studying problems connected with mining and metallurgical operations, as some of it is understood to have been of a quite revolutionary character.

All students interested in the subject have been invited to attend by the Society executive.

Club To Hold Meeting In Union Tonight

SMALL CHARGE

Varied Program Arranged By Executive Including Sketches

This evening at 8.30, members of the German Club will convene in the McGill Union, for what the executive promises will be a highly enjoyable meeting. This meeting will take the form of a "Bierabend," that is, the chief refreshment of the evening will consist of beer. Those present can therefore be assured of a typical German atmosphere.

If one can judge from similar functions held in the past by the German Club, then this evening's "Bierabend" should be a huge success. Moreover it is rumoured that the executive has been working very assiduously to see that it will live up to the high standard set by its predecessors.

Members to Sing

In addition to the keg of beer, a program of sketches has been arranged. Song-books will also be handed out during the evening for the purpose of singing "Studentienlelder" and other German songs.

It is expected that several members of the German Department will be in attendance as they have in the past. The executive extends a cordial welcome to all students with a knowledge of German and assures them that neither enjoyment nor entertainment will be lacking. There will also be the

Economists Discuss Economic Recovery

Walsh And Brenhouse Speakers at Political Economy Meeting

"The Way to Economic Recovery with Particular Reference to the Regulated State" will be the subject to be discussed at the next meeting of the Political Economy Club, Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Smoking Room of the Arts Building. The speakers will be Allison Walsh, President of the Club and Sam Brenhouse, both Fourth Year Honor Students in the Department of Economics and Political Science.

As the subject is such a pertinent one at the present time and covers such a broad field the speakers are going to deal with as many aspects of the question as possible, rather than specialising on one part of it. Over a hundred books and several thousand magazine articles have been written on this topic during the past two years, so only a brief survey of the field is possible.

After the meeting discussion will take place as usual. All students of Economics are invited to attend.

Far East Situation Result Of Japan's Imperialistic Policy

McGill Junior Debating League Defeats Loyola College

ACTION UNETHICAL

Gross And Kerr Deplore Japan's Seizure Of Manchuria

Launching a vigorous attack on the Japanese occupation of Manchuria on the grounds that it is unethical, detrimental to the Peace Ideal and conducive to world war, Clarence Gross and John Kerr, representing the McGill Junior Debating League defeated a team from Loyola College Friday evening on the resolution "That this House deplores the Japanese occupation of Manchuria." This debate, a regular fixture of the Montreal Debating League was the first in which the McGill team participated. The debate was held at Loyola College, which was represented by R. Altimas and F. Fleury.

Clarence Gross, the first speaker on the affirmative, gave a brief historical survey leading up to the occupation of Manchuria by the Japanese. He stated that Japan had pledged herself in several treaties to maintain world peace and to respect the territorial right of other nations. Yet she has sent 100 000 soldiers into Manchuria and shed needless blood. Therefore her action is deplorable because it is unethical and anything that is unethical can't do the world any good, stated the speaker.

Effect on World Peace

This action will have a detrimental effect on disarmament and world peace. For several years the ideal of peace has been flourishing, and an incident such as this will cause people to lose faith in it, even if the action is only temporary. Moreover the situation leading up to the occupation of Manchuria by the Japanese is almost parallel to the events leading up to the World War. Such an action will only precipitate another universal war. Gross then quoted from the Ten

The nomination of candidates for the Students' Executive Council and the Scarlet Key Society from the class of Arts '34 took place at a meeting in Room 70 of the Arts Building last Friday at 1:00 p.m. The names of the nominees will be made known at a later date.

Tomorrow a class luncheon is to be held in the Grill Room of the Union. Members are asked to purchase their tickets as soon as possible, and those members who have received tickets in exchange for verbal promissory notes are asked to fulfill their promises by handing in their money before the luncheon.

The first Mock Parliament of the class will also be held sometime this week, when the Prime Minister, M. Bloomfield, will introduce his new bill which will be opposed under the leadership of M. Ransom. All members are invited to attend, especially those who have signified their intention of taking part in the class debates.

Sir Arthur Currie Back At University

Account of Conference Held By University of New York

MANY DELEGATES

World Difficulties Discussed In Relation To University Work

Sir Arthur Currie arrived back at the university on Saturday morning, after attending a conference of universities held under the auspices of the University of New York.

Sir Arthur pointed out that the general sentiment at the conference was that the universities should give to the fullest extent of their resources consideration of the economic and other problems of today. There was an opinion that universities are in a position to make a direct contribution to the solution of the present difficulties of the world, in addition to training students to understand and help to remedy society's problems.

Many Delegates There

At the conference, which lasted three days, were present between 600 and 1,000 delegates from leading universities of the continent, and a number of prominent thinkers from Europe, among whom were Sir James Arthur Salter, former director of the economic and finance section of the League of Nations, and Sir James Irvine, principal and vice-chancellor of St. Andrew's University, Scotland.

Thomas W. Lamont, financier of New York City, in addressing the conference said, "Our primary remedy

English Lit. Society To Meet Wednesday

Patrick Beatts To Speak On Poetry Of The War

"The Poetry of the Great War" will form the subject of discussion at the second meeting of the English Literature Society, to be held this coming Wednesday at four in the Grill Room of the Union. Patrick Beatts will be the speaker of the afternoon.

At the first meeting of the Society those present were requested to turn in their names, along with the particular branch of literature in which they were most interested. The response to this request showed a distinct preference for modern literature.

In view of this fact the executive has selected for the coming meeting a consideration of poetry of the Great War, as a significant and distinctive portion of modern poetry. All those present will be given opportunity to join in the discussion, if they so wish.

Dean Of Faculty Of Medicine Gives First Address

CANCER IS STUDIED

Great Advance In Surgery Merits World Recognition

On Friday evening, sponsored by the Graduates' Society, Dr. C. F. Martin, of the Faculty of Medicine, gave an address on "Research Work at McGill University," over station CKAC. In opening his address, the dean expressed appreciation for the friends of McGill who by their generous aid have enabled extensive work to be carried on in this field.

Dr. Martin pointed out the importance of this technical work which is being carried on unostentatiously in McGill, and which is so necessary in spite of its lack of publicity. As an illustration of this, he remarked on the discovery of the germ of tuberculosis, which though in itself accidental, nevertheless followed naturally as a consequence of a great deal of fundamental work in bacteriology.

Surgical Advances

The speaker then outlined the great advance which has been made in surgery, the results of which have been recognized by the surgical profession the world over. These advances have been particularly outstanding in lung surgery, methods of treating fractures, the study of acute intestinal obstructions, ofcertain forms of gall bladder diseases, and new methods for surgical treatment of ulcers of the stomach. In addition, tribute was paid to the extensive work carried on by the department of internal medicine, where more than twenty individuals are concentrating on problems that are concerned with some of the most urgent needs of our life today. Of this, example was made of the important contributions to the study of nutrition and diatetics.

Continuing his address, Dr. Martin pointed out that "much interest

The department of extra-mural relations at McGill yesterday announced plans for a new course in modern economics to be given by H. Carl Goldenberg, sessional lecturer in economics. A suggestion was made that a proposal should be made to the Arts Undergraduate Society that a dance should be held after the McGill-Harvard game on December 23rd. In the event of the Arts Undergrads not carrying out this proposal it was proposed that a class dance should be held.

League Meets This Afternoon In Union Music Room

FOUR TO DEBATE

General Discussion To Follow Debate — Hasler Critic

The Junior Debating League will hold its second House Debate this afternoon in the Music Room of the Union at four o'clock sharp. The subject under discussion will be "Resolved that newspapers do more harm than good." The affirmative will be supported by Fred Morgan, Arts '36, and Arnold Johnson, Arts' 35, while the negative will be represented by Ben Shecter, Arts '35, and John Peacock, Arts '36.

The fact that there will be two men on each side, which is unusual in these house debates, has been necessitated by the fact that the membership this year has been substantially increased, and only in this way can more of the members participate in the debating.

Critic Present

This year the League has brought in the innovation of having a critic down for the debate to give helpful suggestions. This afternoon, William Hasler, 1931 Bovey Shield winner will be present to speak after the debate.

After the debate there will be a general discussion, in which it is hoped that all members will participate. John MacLeish, President of the League, will be in the chair.

Debaters for the coming debate against Y. M. H. A. on Dec. 1st, will be announced shortly.

S.C.M. Again Makes Financial Appeal To Staff And Students

Total Objective $5,000 — $1,000 Expected From McGill

GREAT NEED EXISTS

Canvassing Already Started In Most Of Faculties

The Students' Christian Association is again making its annual financial appeal to members of the staff and to students in the University, commencing today. The total objective this year is $5,000 of which $1,000 is expected from the University—$500 from the staff and $500 from the students.

This objective is just two-thirds of the budget of last year and thus indicates a number of genuine economy measures in the Association's program and administration. Like all movements supported by voluntary contributions, the S.C.M. is passing through a critical period financially and are forced to rely on the support of their friends to carry them through the crisis.

Collectors Chosen

The executive expresses the wish that all members of the staff and the student body in general will contribute to their work when one of their members calls on them during the coming week.

The campaign leader is Bill Bourne, treasurer of S.C.M. Following is the list of those in charge of canvassing in the various faculties: Arts—Jean Anglin; Commerce — Doug Mellor; Law—Max Ford; R.V.C.—Relief Williams; Theology — Ken Woodwark; Medicine—Hugh Trimmingham; Engineering—Nesbit Dobson. In addition to these, there are collectors in every class.

Lunch Today

All collectors are requested to meet for lunch in Strathcona Hall Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday as well as any who would like to collect.

Canvassing has already started in most of the faculties but as yet no figures are available.

Distribution

THE annual report of the Corporation of McGILL University, issued late last week, contains nearly two hundred pages of serried information. There is much in it of interest to the undergraduate: — evidence of McGill's unsatisfactory financial position, details of the research work that carries her reputation to distant lands, and statement of the insignificant part that government sub-sidies play in supporting the University. Of less importance, perhaps, but of direct concern to the student body, is the table that shows the geographical distribution of students.

The figures are, of course, for the past academic year, but the Students' Directory that will appear shortly will probably show no very great difference in distribution for the present session. Montreal itself contributed over one-half of the total number registered. Canada as a whole, was well represented, with eighty-nine from the most westerly province, eighty from the most easterly, two-hundred and ninety-eight from Ontario, and considerably more than four hundred from the remaining provinces. From the United States came three hundred and twenty-six, and in spite of the increased fees that non British students are now obliged to pay, there is little reason to believe that this number is much reduced at present.

But as we continue our survey of the table we find that, apart from Great Britain and the Irish Free State, only nine European students were registered here last year. And these nine came from widely different regions. They were from France, Germany, Holland, Poland, Russia, Spain, and Switzerland. From China there were four; from the Argentine, one.

It must be considered that a small number of students in attendance here were born, brought up, and schooled in foreign countries, and are now registered under Canadian addresses. Of their nationality this table of geographical distribution, or the Students' Directory, can take no notice. Yet from the figures given above the conclusion can be drawn that McGill, though far less narrow and insular that a good many rural universities, can hardly claim to be called cosmopolitan.

Some one once remarked that, all other things being equal, the most cosmopolitan university is the most educative. — Of course, all other things never are equal. But the remark has its significance. The potential broadening of outlook that lies in contact with foreigners can not be denied. And in these days of alleged strained international relations, the exchange of national view-points might have a large effect in the inducement of clearer thinking on political questions.

And the benefits need not confine themselves to politics. The student struggling to understand the culture of another nation, or even his own culture, can derive immeasurable advantage from conversation and controversy with those who were nutured in distant lands. A foreign element brings with it the possibility of mental expansion and enrichment — a possibility of which advantage is not always taken, but which none the less exists.

It can not be said that continental contacts are entirely lacking at McGill, in spite of the scarcity of foreign students as indicated by these statistics. There are clubs now in action here which have, ostensibly, as their purpose the study of other countries and their cultures. Yet these clubs would be greatly benefitted by more direct knowledge, by more and wider information than one or two students with direct knowledge can supply. They would be truer to the life they are studying, and have a greater educative value for the members.

Undergraduate activities too, in which students meet with less restrictions than in lecture and laboratory, would have additional benefit if their participants numbered more Europeans and Asiatics. Even as it is now, they bring together English-speaking men and women with diverse upbringing, beliefs and conventions. They do something towards the shedding of local prejudices; but they could do much more if McGill had a more cosmopolitan attendance. Perhaps the gradual growth of her fame — she is yet young compared to others — will bring about this consummation.

THE THEATRE

Audiences

"GEE, aint it morbid?" said one young lady to her escort, during an intermission at "Mourning Becomes Electra."

"Yeah, where shall we go to eat?," he replied.

The first remark, and perhaps the second too, summed up the attitude of a very large part of the audience who listened to the gripping and pregnant lines of O'Neill's latest play. A great many seats were cancelled, we are told, because a downtown newspaper critic, with a mind akin to that revealed above, said in effect, "The play is morbid; it contains immoral suggestion of love and incest; it is not clean and pure-minded."

The play was not regarded as a tragedy, based on problems old as the human passions, and infused with frank and searching psychology. Audiences, nurtured on anti-tragic drama from Hollywood, accustomed to the badly-censored suggestiveness of the screen, could see and hear only those actions and lines which referred to the aims and pleasures of sex. Perhaps "only" is not a just word. Several there were who revealed in the plethora of killings, and, statistically-minded, numerated the carnage on mental fingers.

Yes, the modern audience dislikes tragedy, — it does not understand it. This is an unfavorable indication of the trend of the common mentality. Everything must be smoothly arranged, with no jarring notes, and drama must follow an obvious routine that demands as little concentration as possible. Sex is not considered immoral as long as it requires no thought, and can be ogled with furtive eyes. But deal with its motivation, probe into its psychology, and you become salicious, morbid, and degenerate. Educate the public? How can a dramatist educate the public when it listens to critics —critics "qualified by experience and knowledge" mind you, — who yearn for the white-livered, honey-sweet drama, packed with innuendos, circumlocutions, and all the inhibitory conventions that grandmother possessed.

It is really a wonder why some people attend the theatre at all. It may be merely for the prestige acquired by the statement "Yes, I saw it last night." If for any other reason, why so much shuffling and coughing, why so much inappropriate giggling and raucous applause? Surely it would be better for them to perjure themselves over the next day's cup of tea; say "Yes, I saw it," when they never had; than to irk with their noise and comments the few who are carried along by a dramatist's power, and who see with him into the minds of his creations. T.F.

Movie Reviews

Palace Theatre

IN "Red Dust," the feature attraction at the Palace Theatre this week, we see the super caveman Clark Gable, the screen's most popular male star, co-starred for the first time with the silver-haired Jean Harlow. The plot is rather sketchy and disjointed, but gives the cast good opportunity to show their talent. Clark Gable, playing the role of coolie driver on a rubber plantation, is in his element, and plays his part in a masterful and ruthless manner.

Jean Harlow, playing several roles as camp follower, jealous mistress, match maker and ethical adviser to Clark Gable when the latter is found lacking, is always very witty and observant. Nor is the rest of the cast disappointing — Gene Raymond taking the part of a cheery and innocent young husband of Mary Astor, who, under Gable's spell, just couldn't help herself. D.H.F.B.

Capitol Theatre

ONE of the most famous of faces in filmdom returns to Montreal this week in "Tiger Shark," starring E. G. Robinson, which is playing at the Capitol. An unusual picture, this, with perhaps the most thrilling moments I have ever seen as human beings battle with man-eating sharks, a few yards, apparently from the camera. There is a love story interwoven, of course, but it is of a different type from the ordinary triangle and does not spoil the action of the picture as so many subordinated love stories do. As Mike Mascarena, a Portugese captain, Robinson gives his finest performance to date.

The second feature, "Three on a Match," is just another fair film which concerns the romatic adventures of three school chums who meet in later life under romantic circumstances. There are racketeers and so forth to pep the story up a bit. Ann Dvorak is the star.

Princess Theatre

THE columnist craze is now in full swing. "Okay America," the principal feature at the Princess Theatre during the coming week, is the third or fourth of these pictures which Montrealers have seen in the past month or two. The title of the picture was drawn from a well-known radio program and was popularised by that star of New York columnists, Walter Winchell. Lew Ayres plays with pleasant gusto the part of the columnist, and has for his leading lady, Maureen O'Sullivan who can act, in addition to looking cute. The picture depicts the professional activities of a columnist on a large New York Paper; showing how he obtains his information; the people it affects and their reactions; and finally his leap to nation wide fame through his intimate radio talks. Taking for granted a suspension of disbelief, it is fascinating and exciting entertainment.

The other picture of the double bill, Children of the Big House, stars Junior Durkin, and Pat O'Brien, in a slightly overdone story of a certain strata of American life. L.P.

Loew's Theatre

AS a fitting celebration of its fifteenth Anniversary, Loew's Theatre offers this week a better than average entertainment. The vaudeville acts have been increased from the usual five to seven, and the leading man of the feature picture is none other than Warner Baxter. The story of "Six Hours to Live" centres about a world trade treaty which is being opposed by a small republic represented by Warner Baxter. The latter is strangled to death so that he may not be able to oppose the final vote. Here the imagination of the audience must be stretched to a considerable degree, for an old scientist brings him back to life for six hours. Yet in spite of this, "Six Hours to Live" may be classed as "excellent entertainment" due to the fine acting of the principals.

The best acts of the vaudeville are the Wilton Sisters in popular songs; Vernon Rathburn as "The Prince of Rhythm;" and Rosette and Luttman in Dance Stories. The act of Cass, Mack and Owen is a perfect example of slapstick comedy. J.P.R.

Cinéma de Paris

"AMOURS TRAGIQUES" is at the Cinema de Paris this week, and it will make you very sad if you want to be made sad. The eternal quadrangle, or quadrilateral appears, with three men falling in love with the same girl. Blood, death, and the police all combine to give some enthralling, — and well-acted too — scenes. (This picture is French).

Dolly Davis and Jean Marchat lead the cast, and lead it with nerve, imagination, and a sense of tragedy that is not influenced with Goethe's remark to the effect that "pooh, it is easy to touch the heart." Goethe never saw the way some tragedies from H. try to do it. To return to our muttons, "Armours Tragiques" also contains actors of much merit in Adrien Lamy and Georges Paulais.

Cinéma Imperial

ARMAND Bernard, playing the leading role in "Si Tu Veux" at the Imperial this week, maintains and enhances his reputation of being an able and clever comedian; while Jeanne Boitel, although not really convincing as a successful young authoress, is certainly attractive, and, with Jacques Maury as the manly young suitor, effectively supports the lead.

As one now expects of the European film, this comedy shows an artistic sense of balance so sadly lacking in American productions. Romance sufficient to contrast the humorous moments, — but not overstressed to the point of sentimentality, — is woven into a rather novel and rapidly moving plot. Introduced as a member of an itinerant troupe of actors, Armand Bernard produces lots of laugher in some really clever comedy and witty dialogues. Becoming then a chauffeur to the authoress, he creates false impressions which provide difficult situations lasting throughout the remainder of the picture. The rest of the entertainment is of good quality and completes a fine presentation. L.W.B.

College Comment

College Is Serious

While embarking on that interesting journey, a college education, the incoming freshmen should not let the novelty of the situation submerge the fact that the path ahead is a precarious one. There is considerable advice that can be broadcast to the newcomers, but a few words will suffice.

Business leaders have said that one direct result of the current depression will be the increased value of a college degree in the future industrial world. This, coupled with the fact that due to prevailing unemployment, university applicants are increasing, should serve as sufficient impetus for every person fortunate to be able to enjoy the tremendous advantages of advanced education to apply himself conscientiously and make the most of his opportunities.

The old "rah-rah" collegian of the past decade has fortunately, been replaced by a more serious type of student. That college student who has time only for a healthy and constructive program of academic, social and extra-curricular activities will be the successful business man of the future, and this may be accomplished only by the realization that a college education should be pursued conscientiously and seriously.

Correspondence

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:

I note with regret a certain phrase in the advance of the German Club's "Bierabend." It was stated that the main feature of the evening would be a keg of beer.

Perhaps it was a mistake to allow this gathering to take on the very misleading name of "Biera bend"; it should have been called a "Kommersabend." The purpose and feature of the evening is to join together in the student, folk, and popular songs of German student life, and in accordance with student custom beer will be served at the same time. If one might have judged from the advance it was a case of beer—in liberal quantities—accompanied by a little music. In reality it is exactly the reverse.

I have taken the liberty of using your column, Sir, because I wish to impress upon the members of the club, particularly the ladies, as well as upon those who might have found ground for adverse criticism of the club in the advance mentioned, that it is an evening of German song for both the ladies and the men, and the serving of beer is a detail intended primarily to lend local color. To those who are not friends of this patriarchial beverage, there will be other refreshments.

Yours very truly,
H. M. SCHAFHAUSEN.

The Editor,
McGill Daily:

Sir,—

A recent correspondentremarked:—"The function of criticism, as I understand it, is not the function of snipe-shooting." Unfortunately the gentleman did not equally well understand that the function of criticism is still less a matter of diving after the green Fisherman's Ring. He accordingly writ the name of Chesterton in the waters of ultramontanism. The act was heroic but futile. For I doubt if the most warped Chestertonian mind could establish the literary preeminence of G. K. C. by proclaiming him the generalissimo of Catholic culture militant.

I effect your correspondent has said that G. K. C. is the most consummate literary light of his age because he is the resurrection of "Catholic culture in the English tongue." Certainly this is the paradox out-paradoxed. It must be some consolation to Mr. Chesterton for that helpless nudity into which his over-earnest disciple precipitates him, by stripping him of his romanticism. That vision of simple and carefree life in the unsophisticated middle-ages is the very tantara of his crusade.

The spectacle of the portly Chesterton, like some mischevious friar, hiding the light of science under the bushel of medieval darkness, recalls what Garibaldo once said of priests They "look backwards, not forward. They think that there were once men better and wiser than those who now live"—And if your naive correspondent believes that the keynote of modern civilization is a wistful contemplation of some golden antiquity, he should perceive the irony of complaining of a dereliction of "cultural tradition" on the part of Chesterton's critic.

Surely the aspiration to rise from the shackles of the stringent past, to tear the scales of ignorance from our eyes, and carve with venturous thought the marble of futurity,—is no small portion of our heritage. But the bigotry of the Babbit will have none of this. One can but leave him blissful in his ignorance.

In closing, might I advise your correspondent that his appreciation of Catholic culture would find truer expression in charitable works than in spiteful disparagement of that innocent organ — The Oklahoma Teacher's Journal.

Yours truly,
R. A. B.

Harvard Discovers New Circulation

Ann Arbor, Mich. — Discovery at Harvard University of a new form of circulation, which may explain the creep of poison in the skin, has been reported to the National Academy of Sciences.

This circulation is probably a movement through fat, which proceeds from cell to cell of the body, a distinctly new method of passage of vital substances. It adds a third to the two well known circulatory systems—the blood and the slower-moving, water-white lymph.

The evidence was presented by George H. Parker, one of America's foremost Zoologists, professor in that subject and director of the Harvard zoological laboratory.

He found this queer hand-to-hand method of hauling vital materials through the fat, by studying the so-called "blushing" of fishes. This blushing is the ability of fishes to turn dark or light according to their environments. The trick enables some pink fish to blush a beautiful red.

Juniors Meet St. Francois in League Opener Tonight

Red Junior Hockey Six Expects Win

Inaugural Doubleheader of J.A.H.A. Scheduled For Tonight at Forum

McGILL-ST. FRANCOIS PLAY FIRST GAME

THE McGill Junior Hockey team makes its bow tonight in the first game of the J.A.H.A. inaugural doubleheader at the Forum when it meets St. Francois Xavier Juniors. The game is scheduled to start at 8:00 o'clock sharp; Royals and Loyola are drawn to meet in the nightcap.

The switching of the junior games from Saturday afternoons to Monday evenings, should prove a great boon to junior hockey in Montreal, and a record crowd is expected at the Forum tonight to usher in junior hockey as an evening attraction. It is to be hoped that the student body will rally to the support of their second team so that it can continue its success of last year when it finished in second place in the league standing.

Team Has Possibilities

Dr. Bobbie Bell, who is coaching the juniors, has had his team practising hard all week and reports that they show promise of being equal to last year's squad. A number of last year's men are back and in good shape for the opening game. If Rollie Lamb, who is out at Macdonald can come in for the game, it will boost the team's stock considerably, for then last year's starting forward line of Tommy Morse, Alex. Duff and Rollie Lamb will be intact.

McLernon and Riddell of last season's squad will also play tonight, though the latter may be graduated to the senior team before very long. New players who will appear tonight are Pacaud, Wigle, Grier, Patton, Elwood and Westman. The team is expected to line up as follows for the game against St. Francois. Goal, Pacaud; defense, Riddell, Wigle, Woo; centre, Duff; right wing, Morse; left wing, Lamb. Substitutes, Grier, Patton, Elwood McLernon and Westman.

Senior Puck Squad Prepares For Vics

Carlin Team Expected To Provide Stiff Opposition

CANADIENS IN LEAD

WEDNESDAY night's Senior Group double-bill again presents two high class contests for the hockey enthusiasts. McGill, now tied for second place with the Royals, oppose Frank Carlin's rejuvenated Victorias while the league-leading Canadiens will meet Royals. The first game will present the last named teams, with the McGill-Vics match topping off the card.

At present the speedy Canadiens have a one point lead over Royals and McGill, having won one game and tied one. They defeated the redmen in the league-opener by a one goal margin but were held to a 1-1 draw by the Maroon shirted Vics last Wednesday night, after the Bellmen had registered their initial victory over Columbus. The Royals, in their only start to date, chalked up a decisive win over Columbus in a game that hardly gave the critics a chance to estimate their power. In the Flying Frenchmen however they will find worthy opponents and will have to travel all out if they are to hold Doc Clements' squad in check.

Teams Evenly Matched

The McGill-Vics match will be of just as high calibre as the first, both teams being about equal on their showings so far. Vics were practically an unknown quantity before they met Canadiens but will bear watching from now on, while the red and white squad has indicated that it will be a strong contender all the way.

In preparation for the tilt Bobby Bell has been working his charges overtime. They have been on the ice daily at the Forum under the watchful eye of the dapper doctor, who has

EXHIBITION BOUTS AT FIELD HOUSE DRAW GOOD CROWD

Hugh McGregor Wins Close Fight From Former City Champ

DESPITE the inclemency of the weather, a good crowd witnessed the bouts at the Field House on Saturday, which marked the boxing club's initial offering of the season. Six good bouts were run off, and Coach Light expressed himself satisfied with boxing conditions thus far.

The highlight of the afternoon was the bout in which Hughie McGregor, last year's intercollegiate 135-pound champ, opposed Jim Buchanan who held the City championship last year. McGregor earned the judges' decision after three rounds of hard fighting. Both opened the fight, boxing in whirlwind fashion and each seemed eager for a knockout. Due to overeagerness they both missed many hard blows which would have been haymakers.

In the second round both fighters boxed cautiously, hitting hard only when they saw openings. McGregor's smooth style stood him good stead, and his vicious left jabs began soon to find their mark. He floored Buchanan twice with hard rights. This pace told on Buchanan and in the last minutes of the bout McGregor had the former champion on the verge of a knockout. The bell saved the situation.

All Bouts Good

Morgan and Gildea faced each other in the initial bout. Both boys hit hard and showed a willingness to mix it up. Morgan's long lefts rocked Gildea several times, but the latter retaliated as often with a hard left jab and a swinging right. Gildea's aggressiveness won a decision in his favor.

One of the features of the afternoon was the bout in which "Red" McLennan and Les McGregor, both 165-pounders, tossed lefts and rights with an eagerness that had the crowd on its feet on many occasions. Both boys stood toe to toe and punched with all they had; McLennan's right swings staggered McGregor several times while his defence blocked many of McGregor's hard punches. The judges rendered a decision in McLennan's favor. In the other bouts Southwood won a decision over Stan Smith, while D. M. Jamieson and Frank Nobbs won over Dick Johnson and Bob Kirkpatrick in their respective bouts.

Prospects Good

According to Coach Bert Light, prospects for the coming season are good. With more training Southwood should make a good contender in the 118-pound class. Bill Moran who occupied this berth on the last year's first team has put on additional weight and will fight in the 125-pound class this season. Hugie McGregor, who looks in better condition than ever, should hold his position in the 135-pound division. He might, however receive stiff competition from Crutchlow, who has yet to turn out.

Jamieson, Corbett, and Johnson in the 155-pound class, and McLennan and Brenhouse at 165 pounds, are all good prospects. In the heavy division George Maughan and Roger Wilson will no doubt fight it out again for a place on the team.

The following are the results of Saturday's meet:

118 pounds: T. Southwood defeated Smith.

135 pounds: F. Nobbs defeated R. Kirkpatrick.

135 pounds: H. McGregor defeated J. Buchanan.

145 pounds: W. Gildea defeated G. Morgan.

155 pounds: D. M. Jamelson defeated R. Johnson.

165 pounds: R. McLennan defeated L. McGregor.

Judges for meet were: Jas McMillen, M.A.A.A.; Wm. Caruthers, Verdun "Y"; Vic Fassio.

Referee: Coach Bert Light.

SENIOR HOCKEY

The senior team will practise at the Forum this afternoon at 1:30 sharp. All men must be out.

The Art of Self Defence

By Coach Bert Light

BLOW NO. 2

Straight Right Lead to Body

YOU are again assuming the orthodox stance for boxing and are "on guard," with your left foot well forward, flat on the floor, while the right is a proportionate distance behind (according, of course to your height). Raising the right heel, well poised, properly balanced, with that relaxed feeling at the knees, boxing between those two "imaginary walls"—exact width of your shoulders—keep your elbows in close to the sides, remembering (as mentioned in previous chapter on Blow No. 1), not to bump your elbows on this wall. You are now "set," about to deliver our No. 2 blow, the right lead to the body or "heart."

OBSERVE THE "WALLS"

The right arm is naturally better controlled, and of course more powerful than the left, because, assuming the proper stance, the left shoulder is well to the front, while, being well back, right hand blows gain additional momentum and force when they are shot forward. For, with every right hand blow naturally comes the full swing of the body, and in this particular case, on Blow No. 2, the right "shoulder" plays an important part.

IT IS very noticeable among beginners that they use their right hand for leading. This they should refrain from doing, and get the habit of using the right only as a guard until, of course, they know sufficient about the "game" to have full confidence in "feinting" (pretending to lead) with their right and following with a good hard left or vice-versa. For, in using the right, whether it be straight lead to the body of a right cross to the jaw, it undoubtedly leaves you wide open without a proper guard, and at the mercy of your opponent, until you recover your proper balance and stance.

LEFT HAND FOR "LEAD"

In driving out this straight right to body, it is shot out like a piston in perfect line and straight, dropping the body slightly over to the left, thus giving you every advantage of using your body behind the punch.

IN THIS blow, which is delivered from the hips or from near the waist, the position of the fist is of vital importance. Keep the knuckle "out," facing the right wall, and drive the blow with plenty of body force and speed, but absolutely straight. Otherwise, the force of punch sent in any other direction will naturally throw you off balance. A slow travelling right isn't worth a snowball as a punch and invites all sorts of counters.

A HARD STRAIGHT BLOW

Make certain, when leading with this right, to have your left well covered, high around your chin, and vice-versa if leading a left to the body. Make sure that no matter how potent your right may be your opponent might possess a more powerful right hand so be well on guard defensively when delivering this "right to the heart." Don't take chances, for he might quickly retaliate and, if off guard, you might be the recipient of a bad jolt, finding yourself in oblivion for a few seconds.

AS IN golf, when you "tee off" and assume your proper stance, with body relaxed, you must "follow through," in order to drive your ball for greater distance and straight. So it is in boxing, practically every blow, in order to get results, must have its "follow through"—especially with this No. 2. As your body goes through with the punch keep the chin well down on your chest. Next week we will deal with the famous "sleep producer" of "Baby-face" Jimmy McLarnin, Blow No. 3—Left Hook to Head.

BASKETBALL TEAMS CONTINUE DRILLS FOR COMING SEASON

Centres Would Prove Welcome Addition To City League Squad

WITH competition in the City League bound to be keener than ever this year, Coach Van Wagner's second stringers are working strenuously in an endeavour to field as strong a team as possible. About a dozen men are at present trying for positions on the team, among whom, however, there is a remarkable dearth of centres. Any reticent aspirants for this position are requested to step forward and show their wares. Bill Monahan, last year's centre is expected to put in an appearance within a day or two, and his presence will, no doubt, materially strengthen the squad.

Eddie Gronau's Fusiliers, who took the provincial crown last year and went on to defeat the Ottawa Valley representatives, are more or less intact this year and will function under the colors and name of the National A.A.A. Cliff Melville will be their centre again, and if he has as good a season as he did last year, will bear watching from opposing guards. Godsall, Schuler, Eaman and Robertson will form the champions' defence—as formidable a rear-guard as one could wish for. Johnny Schuler was well up in the scoring list last year, and his height and reach make it difficult to get by him.

Baysinger for Stevens

It seems to be the policy of Coach Gronau to have at least one star M.A.A.A. rugbyist on his roster each year. Last year, Warren Stevens played that role and though an unwilling worker, he proved his worth by his accurate shooting in the playoff series against the Red Interlegiates. This season, the renamed Fusiliers have acquired both Baysinger and Newton, the former a forward-passer of note, and the latter M.A.A.A.'s 200-lb. snap. Opposing forwards will have their work cut out getting past this giant guard.

In addition to these new men, the N.A.A.A. have secured Bunny Talpis—stalwart of McGill teams for the past four years. With this lineup the Nationals appear, to date, to have the best possible chances to repeat, though all the other entries in the league—of which there are six this year—seem to have strengthened their squads materially.

Squads Incomplete

Both McGill squads have not yet attained their full numbers, about a half-dozen men still being among the absent. As these men were all occupied with some other sport, now over, Coach Van Wagner is expecting their daily return, to round out his squad. At present there are about 25 men participating in the drills, and all appear to be in excellent shape. The

Frosh and Sophs Engage In Swim Meet Next Monday

NEXT Monday the annual Freshman-Sophomore swimming meet will take place at the Knights of Columbus pool. This meet, the first of the season for McGill swimmers is open to all first and second year men, in all faculties. Entries will be received up to the time of the various races, and it is hoped that a large number of men will turn out to make the meet a success.

Entries in the meet are usually not too numerous, thus giving the newcomer an opportunity to break into the winning column. Last year the Sophomores ran off with the meet by the score of 26-19 but this was due largely to their greater number of entrants in the different races.

Many Events

The events range from 50-yard dashes to the longer distances of 100 and 200 yards, and include free-style, backstroke and breast-stroke swims. A diving event and a relay is also on the program. The results of this meet are closely watched, as new material is needed every year on the swimming team, which competes in outside meets with the local swimmers and American Colleges. The interfaculty meet follows this meet early in December.

BADMINTON

The court in the Union Ballroom is open from now on at all times. The court in the M.H.S. Gym will be available on Tuesdays from 7-9.

A few people think that a bank wakes up at 10 A.M. and goes to sleep at 3 P.M. — a few, but very few.

Most people know that behind "banking hours" are many hours of hard work, when the machinery for the transaction of the nation's business works at top speed.

It is working to ensure that at no time will there be any letting up in the financial efficiency of the country.

Think of that when you pass a bank's closed doors.

fessors, with tutors and fellows. In 1844, there were but five professors and nine students. Today, 90 professors, and more than 500 associate and assistant professors, clinical and research professors, lecturers and research fellows, are engaged with a student body numbering approximately 4,000.

The report enumerates the gifts bequeathed to the University during the last ten years, and illustrates graphically the ever increasing cost of higher education. The different measures of economy which will be put into effect in the coming year are fully explained, and the resultant savings carefully estimated.

Much Ground Covered

Another section is devoted to the research work which has been carried out by the different faculties during the past year. Changes in the staff are fully discussed, and the field of work to be covered by the new Neurological Institute, the Department of Parasitology at Macdonald, and other recent additions, is thoroughly surveyed. A substantial portion of the report is taken up by a detailed account of all the publications of members of the staff of the University, and the more important student works have appeared throughout the year.

The keynote to the entire report, which is one of great progress, is struck by the Principal in his preface at the very beginning. He says:

"Universities are not alone in this matter of scrutiny and criticism. It extends to all governmental bodies, national, provincial and civic. The increased cost of our governments and the high expenses of certain public undertakings have been commented upon, while the efficiency of these governments and undertakings has been questioned. There are, too, murmurs of discontent regarding the present cost of our higher educational facilities. One feels that this may be so because the great majority of the people seldom consider the vital part universities play in the national life of the country, or what the community would be like without the contribution they are able to make."

Community and University

"The contribution of the university to the future can only be made, however, if there is continued co-operation between the community and the university. We can work successfully only if we work together. The community must realize what it owes the university for its vast contribution to the material prosperity and spiritual happiness of the people; equally, the university must not fail to acknowledge its tremendous debt to those responsible for its growth and development. For a university such as ours is no impersonal thing. Into its veins and arteries has been poured the life-blood of innumerable persons who have accepted self-sacrifice that it might live. There have been generous benefactors who have denied themselves that material resources might be provided; there have been wise counsellors and stimulating teachers who have dedicated their lives to its service; there have been devoted graduates who have sustained keen interest and given loyal support to widen their Alma Mater's sphere of influence."

New Device Aids Flyers

Urbana, Ill.—Ice formation on wing surfaces, the aviation hazard which almost forced Charles A. Lindbergh into the sea on his flight to Paris, can now be controlled to a fairly large extent, according to Prof. M. R. Riddell, assistant director of the engineering experiment station at the University of Illinois. A new device permits pilots to send compressed air into a rubber sheath on the front edge of the wing, cracking off a layer of ice as soon as it forms.

The compressed air method was worked out after a great deal of research, Prof. Riddell said. Oil and grease coatings were found to be ineffectual, and other surface coatings were only partially successful. Paraffin, vaseline, goose grease, glycerine, corn syrup, honey, and soap were all tested in the effort to find some substance which would keep ice from sticking to the airplane wings.

No Forced Landings

The new method should make a good many forced landings unnecessary, if it is used on our transport and airmail planes, Prof. Riddell believes. Instead of trusting to luck in an ice-storm, a pilot can now make certain that his wing surfaces are kept clear. Formerly he either had to fly around the storm or take a chance that he could get through without mishap.

also attaches to the studies that are being made in the department of obstetrics and gynaecology, more particularly with respect to the benefits of radium in the treatment of certain forms of cancer. Cancer itself is being studied from the biological and practical viewpoints, made possible by gifts from interested friends of the university."

Dr. Martin laid particular stress on the work being done in the biological and physiological laboratories, and on that of pathological laboratories, where fundamental work is being carried on in diseases of the blood, and men are being trained with a scientific viewpoint which is equal to the best in any laboratories in the country.

Capacity Audience Greets Orchestra

Boellman's "Symphony Variations" Excellently Presented

BELLAND DID WELL

Good Color And Simple Handling Characterize Cosmopolitan Program

With an audience that almost crammed the theatre, and that was still buying tickets when the second number was well on its way, the Montreal Orchestra might have been inspired to greater heights than it reached at its concert yesterday in His Majesty's Theatre. It is not to be denied that they were as good as usual, but their program was of such exceptionally good choice as to demand unusual playing.

The Boellmann "Symphony Variations" showed the Orchestra up to its best form and gave Jean Belland, the first 'cellist, opportunity at very proficient playing, a neat technique, and a lucid interpretation of his part. His instrumental tone is rather deep, but blends well with the orchestra. The music, fresh, graceful and admirably scored helped the orchestra in its smoothly handled accompaniment.

Brahms Symphony

The Brahms Symphony No. 1, the work over which the composer spent so much time in preparation, was handled rather unevenly. There was little fault to find with the tone, which was in fact so clear as to belie the accusation of muddiness which critics levelled against the number when first it was played. The discipline of the instruments was not up to standard, however, causing some straggling passages. The last two movements improved somewhat in matters of rendition.

The program numbers, Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" and Grieg's first "Peer Gynt Suite" were offered with the same good color and simple handling that is characteristic of these musicians in such items. They completed a program that was cosmopolitan in taste and depth.

Act Memorial in which Japan clearly gave evidence of her desire to obtain possession of the world and that such could only be effected by first getting control of Manchuria.

F. Fleury, first speaker of the negative stated that his purpose was to show that Japan's occupation of Manchuria was justified and would be advantageous to the world at large and hence could not be deplored. He, too, gave a historical survey but went farther back than Gross, quoting the Sino-Japanese War of 1894 and the Russo-Japanese War of 1904, by which Japan by international arbitration got possession of part of Manchuria.

Outlet Needed

Since 1911 China has been in chaos, run by irresponsible soldiers and bandits. Fleury stressed the great need of an outlet for her overcrowded population and the fact that Japan has invested millions in the natural resources of Manchuria. He concluded that in the face of this, hadn't Japan a right to take occupation of Manchuria, part of which was hers, in which she had millions invested and in which her citizens were being mistreated?

J. Kerr, second speaker on the affirmative, stated that the density of Japan's population was no greater than several other European nations. Japan's action is nothing more than the culmination of an aggressive imperialistic policy for fifty years. There is sufficient evidence to show Japan's desire for world conquest and her action is proof of her avaricious greed, stated the speaker. Who can guarantee for the safety of the world after such an action? Finally, it is very possible that China, harassed by the Japanese and facing disintegration will look forward to Communism and Bolshevikism as her only salvation. Could any sane person, stated the speaker, support an action which would lead to such a step?

Japan Justified

R. Altimas, second speaker on the negative, stated that actually Japan is not breaking any treaties or covenants since she is only defending the rights of property that was granted her. He said that the Lytton Report was simply a theoretical statement and could not be considered as a just one. Japan has made Manchuria what it is today, she has brought out its natural resources and hence her action is justifiable.

In the rebuttal, C. Gross stated that the negative had not in any way shown how the occupation of Manchuria would do either Manchuria or the world any good. It is not what Japan needs, stated the speaker, that is to be deplored, but the manner in which she takes what she needs.

The judges rendered the verdict to the affirmative.

been smoothing out some of the rough spots that were apparent in the previous games. The defence is rapidly rounding into shape and Meiklejohn and Shaughnessy are expected to provide Maurice Powers with plenty of protection against the Carlin snipers. It is possible that Johnny Riddell will perform on the rear-guard as well. Nels Crutchfield will be unable to participate in this game but he is expected out for the encounter with Royals the following Wednesday.

Up front the McGill, Farquharson, Gordie Crutchfield combination is showing plenty of scoring punch. All three are right up with the leaders in the scoring column, followed closely by Kenny Farmer. Tommy Robertson, veteran winger will do the relief work for the front line along with Farmer.

chances for a banner year in basketball seem bright at this stage, though it is hardly time yet to indulge in definite predictions.

Two exhibition games have been arranged for the next fortnight, the first taking place this week at the Sun Life gym, against the two Assurance teams. The Intercollegiates will engage the Sun Life senior City League entry while the Seconds will stack up against their intermediate club. The week following, both squads are down to meet the newly-formed N.D.G. entries, in what promise to be two interesting encounters.
